mount saint agnes college

And he said to me, one day you will rise and ask,
WHO is the face in the glass?

Brown hair,
red, yellow,
eyes that are blue/green, and all colors and it is your face . . .

And behind,
one hundred
faces,
and every face
blending,
the colors
blend
and your face
is mingling
and the question
to ask is

where are your borders, what is the boundary of you?

(I am he as you are he
as you are me
and we are all together.)

There's the answer, he said, but it takes a turning,
and it will come to you, swung out on the long arc of a silence that will not seem to have been a silence.

within you, without you, going and coming,

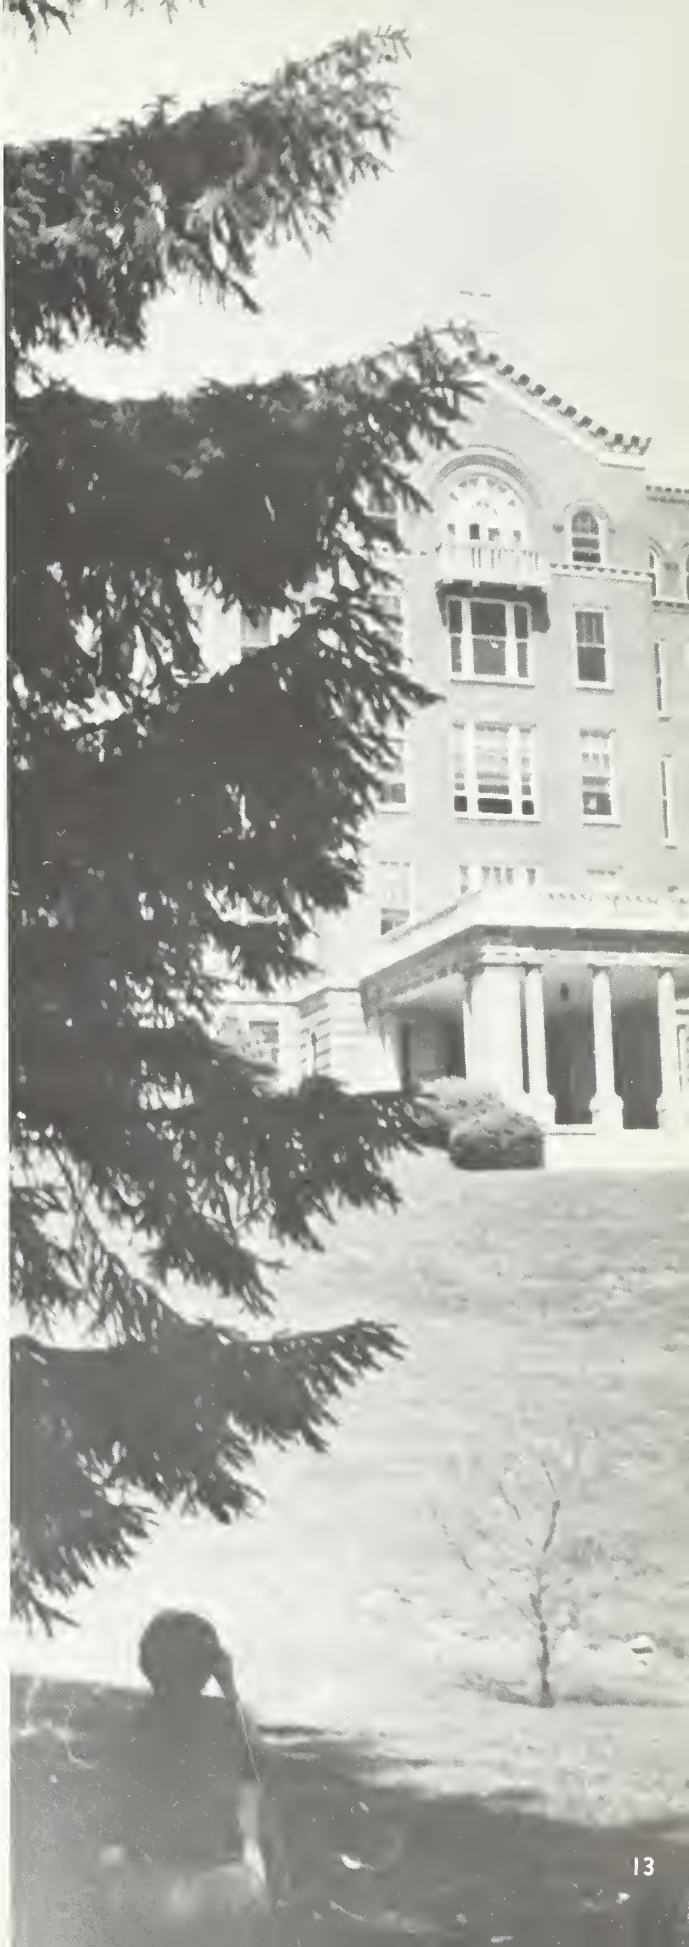
up,

down



all around the town

some where

In a dangle of days,

in sun days you will run, you will begin to see this jangle growing and the colors will blur, he said.

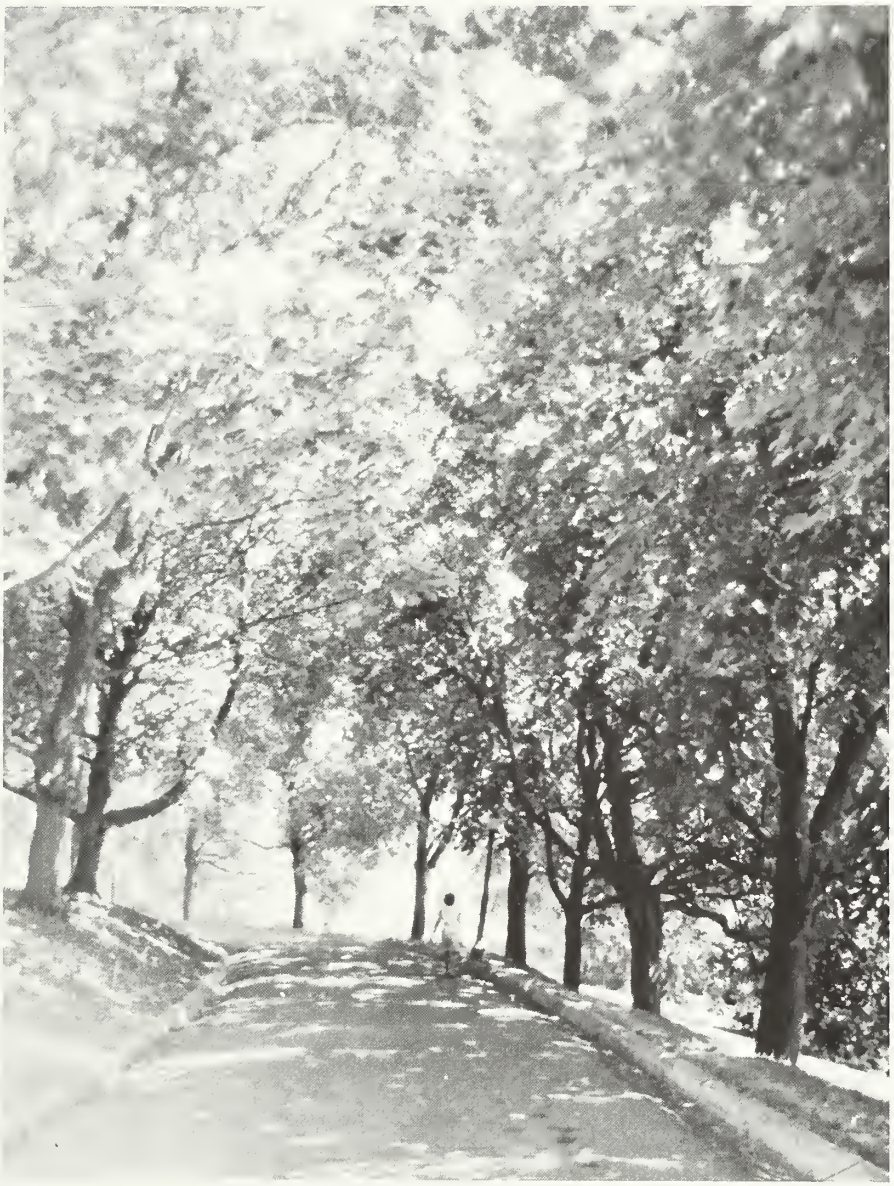
And when they ask
Where are you little girl?

If you look very closely you will see,
Beyond seeing, beyond the rub of colors on your eyes,
One hundred faces come to you.

And so we wander
empty streets down,
singing softly,
softly,



a summer rain is as soft and slow as the coming of you out of clouds and out of smoke such a slow-burning this unselving of self.

Oh how can all these velvet faces violet eyes be sifted-sorted?

It only takes time,

parsley,

sage,

rosemary and a lot of laughing.

I'll smile and
be your mirror,
reflect what you are in case you don't know

I'll be your
wind,
and your sunset

I'll be the light
to your darkness.

I will dance with you,

We'll be gigglish
and girlish

together.

This living,

this learning and all of it to fill up the blanks in an outline, to etch the edge of you (I am he as you are he

as you are me
and we are all together).

Ah,
then read me
books which will sustain
a Girl Wedged
in a Great Tightness.

Her eyes are bright and the sounds of silence throng her ear,

there is a lot of unmixing to do.

Does it come in silver letters
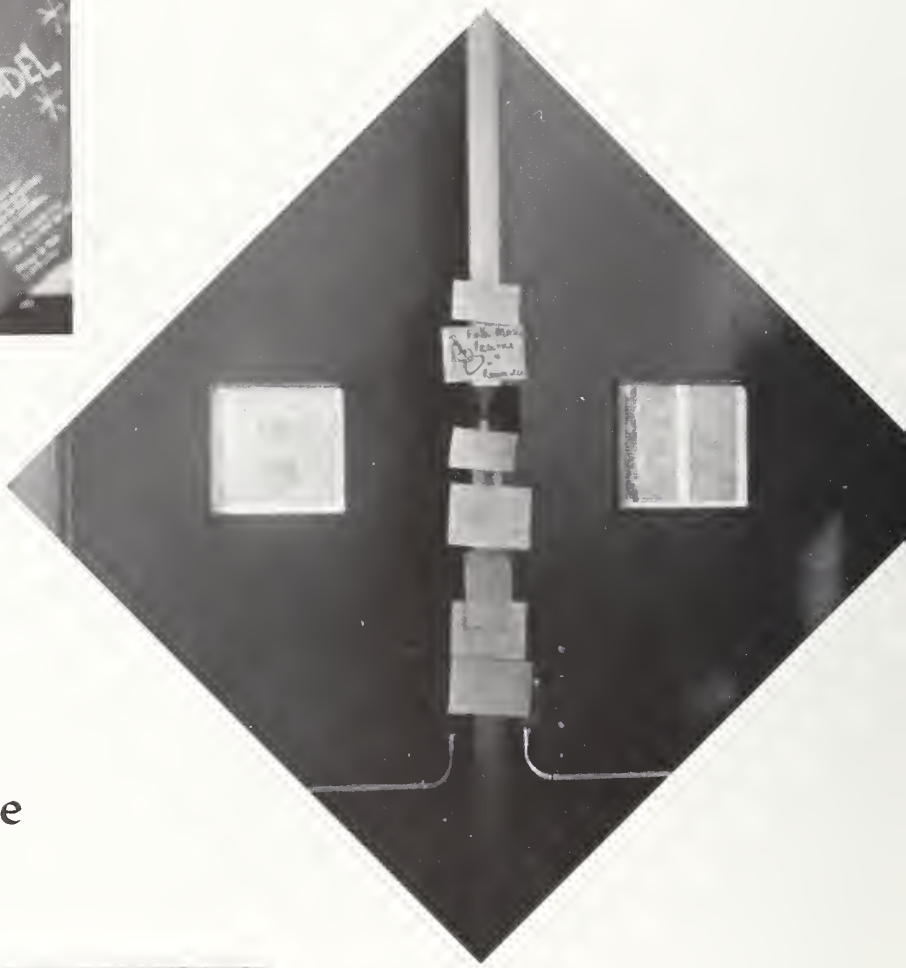
and gold,

is there lightning

fire, ice and flashing?

No, my own girl, he said,
It is slowly, slowly,



and some timetimetime

in a kind of chronic rhyme, you are stopped/stuck,

in the center and the only-ness has you

the loneliness of being non-other, ever after,
after all.

In days like death,
no breath,

no whisper from the mirror.

Alone, alone, all, all alone,

Alone on a wide, wide sea.

The moon turns
and the sun
and time turns.

And
oh god,

the solitude,

(sitting in the morning, I'll be sitting in the evening sun.)

On a dry day,

when being a Self

is a shackle,

an I,
me,
my

(poor little ego)
which must be protected.

(from what?)

ah buddy, ah little girl, he said,
from

Nothing

(shantih)

You learn.

Be still, wait.

In that still center, where the spinning world sleeps on its axis,

to the heart
of rest.

(No sound save the rush of the sea,

still as night or

summer's noontide air,

a white quietness that lets the mind grow inward)

And Love consists in this,

that two solitudes protect and touch and greet each other.

Now

ONE WAY

welcom somer,
with thy sonne
soft

That hast this wintres
weders overshake.
